SYNOPSIS

Life is pretty good for sixteen-year-old Abby. Okay, her grandma doesn't remember things anymore, her relationship with her mum is increasingly strained and she accidentally kissed her cousin's cousin on the weekend, so things aren't exactly perfect. But everything is manageable with her best friend, Ella, by her side.

And with Ella's brother, Will, interesting and attentive, on the sidelines.

When new girl Chloe arrives, Abby is pleased to be the one to show her around, to welcome her to the group. But Abby doesn't imagine Chloe fitting in so well or quite so quickly. And before long Abby is feeling just a little left out, a little unsure of Ella's friendship. In a moment of anger and confusion she wishes something bad would happen.

When it does—with tragic consequences—everything shifts again. And Abby has to face her own feelings and work out what friendship really means.

- 'Every now and then I have this gut reaction where I wish bad luck or disappointment on someone I love.' (p 20) Abby says that she doesn't know where this thought comes from—where do you think it comes from? She worries that these thoughts reflect her 'true self'. (p 21) Do you agree?
- Why do you think Abby finds it hard to make new friends at high school? Reflect on your first year at high school—what were some of the challenges you encountered?
- Why does Abby enjoy netball?
- What is 'lemon and rose'? Come up with your own lemon and your own rose for the day.

AFTER READING

 - What would you say to Abby about this if you were her friend?
- What are some of the changes that Abby describes in Meema? What does Abby miss the most?
- Ella tells Abby, 'I don't think it'd be very easy going to be you.' (p 64) What does she mean by this? Is she right? Why do you think Abby says it feels 'lonely' to be mistaken for easy going?
- How do Abby and her mum say they're sorry?
 - What are some of the ways you say sorry to the people you love?

Style & Structure

- Let's Never Speak of This Again makes use of shorter scenes rather than traditional chapters. Why do you think the writer does this? How do the subheadings help to move the story forward and show the reader where they are in the story?

Themes

Grief

- Abby isn't sure how much grief she's entitled to feel about Will. Is there an easy answer to this? What are some of the factors that make grief so complicated?
- Discuss the way that feelings of grief of Will's death are similar and different to the grief around Meema's dementia and memory loss.
- After Will's funeral, Abby overhears her mum talking about how worried she is about Ella—why? How does Abby finally discover how Ella is feeling? What does she do? What could she have done differently in this moment?
- What does Ms Scott say about grief? Can you find examples of grief doing this in the book?
- Ella tells Abby that she's fine, but Abby knows from 'her flat unemotional tone' that she isn't (p 151). What are some of the ways a friend might show they're not okay? How can we support them?

Friendship

- Abby says that 'although Alice and Jade are best friends, they couldn't be more different'. (p 18) Discuss the saying

- 'opposites attract' in relation to the friendships in the book. Does it apply? Why/why not?
- Why does Mrs Miller choose Abby to be the new girl's buddy? Describe Abby's first impressions of Chloe. How does she feel when Chloe starts to become close with her friends, and with Ella in particular?
 - When Abby is invited to Nicole's house for a netball dinner, she feels out of place until she realises that her friendship with Will gives her a hotline to gossip that the other girls are interested in. She says, 'For the rest of the night, I happily trade everything I know about Will in exchange for their attention and approval.' (p 89) Is this something a friend would really do? Is the attention Abby receives as a result of this and her ongoing Will updates real friendship? Why/why not?
 - How has Abby's friendship with Ella changed since primary school?
 - 'My friendship with Ella isn't the same as it was at the start of the year, but we're not the same either.' (p 206) Is friendship something that should stay the same? How do the differences in Abby and Ella's friendship by the end of the book make it stronger?

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS AND ACTIVITIES

- When Abby accuses her mum of being horrible for putting Meema in 'that awful nursing home', her mum calls her 'a little bitch' (p 73), even though it's a word she hates. What do you think she was thinking before she said this? Rewrite this scene from her mum's perspective.
- 'I wish I knew how my story ends, or even just what comes next.' (p 127) What do you think comes next for Abby? Write a fortune that tells Abby what's around the corner for her.
- Write an alternative version of the story in which Will doesn't die. What do you think would happen?
- How would you encourage someone to pick up this book? Come up with a way to encourage other people at the school to read this book.
- Using some of the examples provided in the book, and your own discussions in class, make a list of red flags and green flags on consent, and turn them into a poster to put up around the school.
