SYNOPSIS

Maddy is mute. Since the Incident she has barely spoken. And now she and her mother and brother are staying in a farmhouse on an old apricot orchard not far from town. It's a chance to rest and recuperate—or a way to hide further away from the world.

Alice is waiting. Since Birdy, her darling daughter, disappeared forty-five years ago, she has sat in her house waiting for her to come home. Alice says Maddy reminds her of Birdy, and Maddy feels a strange connection to the long-lost girl. In the quiet not-speaking and waiting, amid the clutter of the old woman's house, Maddy and Alice slowly become friends. Until Maddy takes something that's not hers.

AFTER READING

Character

- We are introduced to Maddy and the setting at the same time. ‘We are here because of me.’ (p 5), and ‘It’s the perfect place for me.’ (p 6). What does she mean by these words? How does she describe the setting, and what does this reveal about the way she sees herself? How does her relationship with herself change as her relationship with her surroundings does?
- Who is ‘the Professor’? Where does this nickname come from?
- What are Maddy’s first impressions of Alice? How would you describe their friendship?
- Maddy says that Charlie ‘lives in the world with fully focused, magnified attention’ (p 116). Choose three of the items or facts that Charlie focuses his attention on. Discuss their significance to the story.
- Is the way Maddy sees herself accurate? Why or why not?

Style and Structure

- Birdy is a free-form verse novel, which means that it uses poetry to tell the story, but isn’t limited to specific patterns of rhyme or metre. Some say that this allows free verse to mimic natural speech. Do you agree? Consider the following questions about the structure of the book:
  - Why does Maddy feel as if she can express herself more freely in poetry?
  - Maddy writes that even when she doesn’t understand the meaning of a poem, ‘the rhythm and the rhymes—some full, some slant—dance in my mind’ (p 24). Do you agree? Is it possible to connect with the emotion of a poem even if we don’t understand its exact meaning?
  - Explore the shape of the poems on the page. Are they all the same? Discuss the way the shapes of some of the poems reflect their theme?

Themes

Silence

- How have Maddy’s words been used against her in the past?
- Make a list of words and phrases Maddy uses to describe the way it feels not to speak. How do the words feel in her body?
- Maddy wonders ‘why don’t we talk about Maralinga? This is our history. It happened here.’ (p 191). Why do you think we’re so silent about this moment in our past? Is silence the best answer?
- What are some of the things Maddy wants to say to people but doesn’t? What stops her? What has stopped you from sharing things with people in the past?

Shame

- How does Maddy feel around other people? Discuss the way her shame shapes the way she compares herself to others.
- Maddy describes ‘the Incident’ on p 52. Does this description tell you everything you need to understand what happened to her? Is there anything in this list that she should feel ashamed of?
  - Later, she says that she ‘deserve[s] the shame’ (p 141). Do you agree? Why or why not?
- What are some of the things Maddy says about herself that make her feel ashamed? What would you say to her if you could? When Charlie tells Levi about Maddy's selective mutism she wants to 'sink into a pit of shame' (p 72). How does Levi respond to this revelation? How does her response make Maddy feel?

Friendship

- How does Maddy describe her friendship with Levi? Would you say that this is similar to or different from the way she felt in her friendships before 'the Incident'? Why?
- Are Maddy and Alice friends? How would you describe their relationship?
- Why doesn't Maddy tell Levi why she's avoiding her? What is she afraid of?
- What does Levi say when Maddy tells her about 'the Incident'? What does she tell Maddy about her friends? Do you agree?

- Even the most basic elements of your own life can be turned into a poem. Read George Ella Lyon's poem, 'Where I'm From' at this link: <<http://www.georgeellalyon.com/where.html>> then use the template at the following website to create your own 'I Am From' poem <<https://www.bu.edu/dos/files/2020/11/i-am-From-conversation-generation-exercise.pdf>>
- Verse novels have a lot in common with graphic novels, because in the space between the words, there is an opportunity and an invitation for the reader to make meaning. Choose one of the poems from the novel, and turn it into a graphic novel or comic strip.
- Research the 'long dark history' (p 129) of Maralinga, and discuss the way the real-life events have inspired and shaped parts of this novel. What happened there? How were the Indigenous inhabitants of the area treated? How are the lives of the characters in Birdy shaped by these events?
