

Into the Mouth of the Wolf

AUTHOR
ERIN GOUGH

SCIS: 5485797

ISBN: 9781760507558

RECOMMENDED FOR: Mid to Upper Secondary
(Violence, Sexual References, Language)

SYNOPSIS

Dear Iris,

If all goes well I will be in touch by this evening. If you hear nothing, contact Glassy Bay International Travellers' Hostel and ask after me. Use our real names.

Your Mama xxx

Iris lives on the run with her mother, Rohan. They're travelling to escape the earthquakes, though of course that's impossible. And they're being followed. One day, Rohan insists Iris repeat the phrase in bocca al lupo: into the mouth of the wolf. The next day, Rohan's vanished, leaving no clues about where she's gone, besides a contact in an unknown town. Entirely alone and fearing the worst, Iris reaches out to a stranger for help.

When Lena gets Iris's message, she's busy, panic-studying for year 12 and helping run her family's hostel. She's intrigued by Iris, and can't deny there's a spark between them—but she's also worried. A dead body has just washed up at the beach in Glassy Bay. And Lena's old best friend—who's just returned after an unexplained absence—seems to know something about it.

Missing people. Mysterious deaths. A growing attraction between two girls caught up in the search for the truth. Somehow, they're all connected. But in order to find out how—and in order to even meet each other—Iris and Lena will have to go into the mouth of the wolf . . .

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Erin Gough is a Sydney-based writer whose award-winning novels for young adults have been published internationally. Her first novel, The Flywheel, won the Hardie Grant Ampersand Prize, and her second, Amelia Westlake, was the winner of the Readings Young Adult Book Prize and the NSW Premier's Ethel Turner Prize for Young Adult Fiction. Erin's short fiction has appeared in journals and anthologies including The Griffith Review, Kindred: 12 Queer #LoveOzYA Stories, and Best Australian Stories. Into the Mouth of the Wolf is her third novel.

THEMES

- Love

- Survival
- Climate change
- Displacement
- Family
- Grief/loss

STUDY NOTES

THEMES

Family

- In the novel, the author, Erin Gough, explores themes of family, loyalty and loss. Iris and her mother, Rohan, are as close as family can be, so Rohan's disappearance leaves Iris feeling completely alone and unsure who to trust. Lena's family, on the other hand, is more conventional on the surface, but as their secrets are revealed, loyalties and trust are tested. Gough also explores the loyalty of friends and found family, raising questions about where trust comes from and who deserves it. Find examples of loyalty throughout the story.

Climate change

- Into the Mouth of the Wolf is set in an alternative world where Clean Machines have 'solved' the rubbish problem, allowing people to simply dispose of their rubbish into the earth's core. But the technology is having serious repercussions on the environment and, as a result, on people's lives—although the corporations and governments swear Clean Machines are not responsible for the ecological impact. Discuss the way this speculative future acts as an allegory for the ways we're currently experiencing climate change. Why do you think the author has chosen to set the book in this speculative future?

WRITING STYLE

- Climate fiction, or 'cli-fi', is a speculative fiction sub-genre defined by its concerns with climate change, often explored within the scope of an alternative future. They are, in many ways, a kind of cautionary tale of how society might end up if we don't heed the current warnings of climate change. Anthony Doerr, author of Cloud Cuckoo Land, reflects on the importance of cli-fi, saying: 'The world we're handing our kids brims with challenges: climate instability, pandemics, disinformation. I wanted [Cloud Cuckoo Land] to reflect those anxieties, but also offer meaningful hope.' In Into the Mouth of the Wolf, Erin Gough uses this genre to not only explore these themes for a teenage audience, but also through the experience of a teenage character. Discuss the relationship between genre and theme—invite students to express their own concerns for the future, and their response to any themes or genres that are explored in the book.
 - What other common elements might you expect to find in a cli-fi novel?
- Speculative fiction uses 'what if' questions to transport the reader from the familiar to the unfamiliar, often picking up on present concerns or anxieties about particular issues and taking them to an extreme conclusion.
- What do you think the 'what if' question is at the heart of this novel?
 - Come up with a list of possible 'what if' questions, beginning with students' concerns about the future of the planet and climate change. Write a short blurb for a possible speculative novel that explores one of these questions.

Comprehension

- What climate crisis has led to an increase in people living on the road, and why?
- How does Iris feel about life on the road? What does she miss the most about her old life?
- What does the phrase 'into the mouth of the wolf' mean? What's its significance?
- How do the Clean Machines work? What's the problem with them?
- What does the wolf fish coin represent?
- What's the version of events that Iris's father tells her? Do you understand or agree with his actions? Why/why not?
- Why did Prash's family leave Glassy Bay? Why does he come back?
- How would you describe Marty? What makes her angry?
- What draws Lena and Iris together? What do you think will happen to them?

- Which world do you think is closer to our current world, and why?
- What are some of the similarities and differences between Iris's world and Lena's? Where would you rather live and why?
- How does Prash respond to Marty's kiss? What does she assume this means? What does it really mean?
- Would you describe the ending of the novel as happy? Why/why not?

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS AND ACTIVITIES

- Compare Into the Mouth of the Wolf to a news report about climate change. What is the difference in the language between the two? What do you think the purpose of each style of writing is? Choose an event from the book and rewrite it as if you were a journalist.
- The Clean Machines were created with good intentions to solve the waste issue. Come up with your own solution to waste—how would it work? What might some of the unintended side-effects be, and how would you deal with them?
- The book ends with a letter from Rohan to Iris. How do you think Iris feels when she reads it?
 - Imagine she was able to send a letter back—what do you think she'd say?
- 'In all her wonderings Iris wonders most about Kazumi' (p 367). Write a scene in which you imagine what happened to Kazumi immediately after they said goodbye to Iris.
- Write a description (or draw a picture) of what the world might look like five years after the end of the book. Do you think anything will be different?
- Write and record an episode of Marty's podcast using events from the novel as inspiration.

AUTHOR OF NOTES
BEC KAVANAGH