One girl. Three darts. Big trouble.

Twelve-year-old Bella Kerr is a darts prodigy. And when she finds out that her little brother's special schooling is at risk because of lack of money, Bella secretly enters a darts competition at the local pub. The old boys' network of darts players are not happy – none more than the gold-suited charmer, Frankie 'Goldfinger' Phillips – a five-time national champion, who will do anything to stop Bella qualifying for nationals.

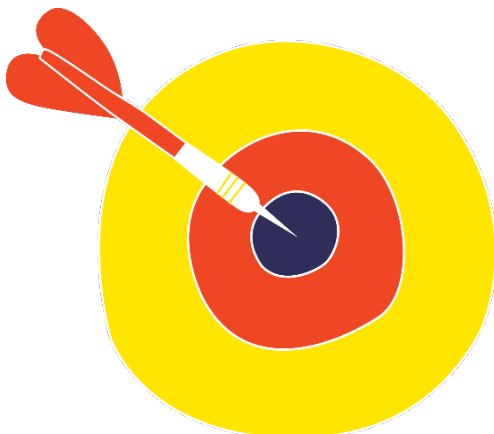

Author James Guthrie lives in Island Bay, Wellington, NZ. He has played bass guitar in rock bands, been a librarian, hosted an NZ music radio show, created computer graphics for children's TV and produced a rugby podcast.

These days he creates websites and runs the award winning blog of his online alter-ego (Natalie Biz - International Librarian of Mystery - bizgirl.blogspot.com).

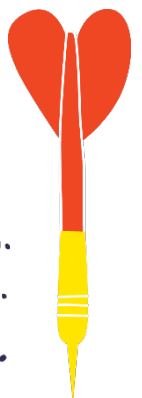

- Laced with humour and chock full of nail-biting drama, this award-winning book is story-telling at its best.
- Guthrie writes with a lightness of touch that makes a game of darts compelling reading!
- Themes include 'girl power', autism, discrimination
- Winner of the Storylines 2018 Tom Fitzgibbon Award
